@gilbert

Sure these Zoom integrations are great, but the real killer feature of a Zoom/Slack collab would be detecting the Slack notification noise when I'm on a call and removing it.

Also, just brutal to @zapier to name them "Zapps".

One non-obvious thing I've learned: products that succeed despite bad UX (early) are (1) doing something very critical and (2) succeeding for non-obvious and thus harder to copy reasons. Bet on them. (E.g. Wix)

This is an excellent read for founders and also startup employees, who often face a crossroads of 1) doing something different 2) applying a playbook from X startup. Those who suggest option #1 are often looked down upon, which is a mistake. Startups should apply both approaches

I've started to incorporate flash cards into my learning workflow, and I realized that I wanted to be able to maintain and review these decks within @code, and store them in GitHub (gists or repos). So I created an extension to do that It's early, but already quite useful

The screenshot shows a web browser with the URL <https://lostintangents-codespaces-contrib-flashcode-vhwg.github.dev>. The page displays a GitHub repository for 'FlashCode' with participants '@FlashCode'. Below the repository information, there is a code editor showing a question/answer pair: 'What's the...' and '<answer>'. A tooltip overlay on the code editor states: 'Cards can include a question/answer pair...'. At the bottom of the code editor, there are two buttons: 'Save and add new card' and 'Save and close deck'.

Zoom cashes in on its pandemic success with 'Zapps' and events Tools

10

 Shahul Rashik | 6 comments

Ever since the pandemic began, everything from concerts to classes has made the transition to Zoom. At one point, I even used Zoom to reach out to my buddy next door! It is evident that Zoom is being used for various events rather than just for business meetings or conferences.

Now Zoom attempts to put a stronghold on this massive audience by introducing a new set of features during its Zoomtopia 2020 event.

Zoom + Apps = Zapps

Zoom introduced 'Zapps' that enables users to directly integrate into third-party platforms including Dropbox, HubSpot, Salesforce, and also this week's top product— LucidSpark. This will allow seamless idea-sharing and facilitates easier collaboration without ever leaving Zoom's interface.

Competition for EventBrite

Zoom also launched OnZoom, an online event platform and marketplace. With this platform, hosts can grow their businesses, expand their reach, and most importantly, they'll also be able to charge for events.

Hosts can add event features such as chat, polls, reactions, and question-and-answer to create a more immersive experience for participants. Meanwhile, consumers can use OnZoom to discover classes, concerts & workshops. Does it mean my Zumba classes will no longer be free? :/
